IN MEMORY OF DR. CURRY

Eloquent Sermons Preached in Savannah by Our Pastors

WHITSITT AND HAWTHORNE

The Former Paid a Touching Tribute to Late Dr. J. L. M. Curry, and Latter Spoke in Memory of Dr. Isaac T. Tichenor.

The storms which deluged Savannah while the Southern Baptist Convention was in session there, and later fell in while the Southern papers was in session there, and later fell in cloudburst form on the city of Jackson-ville, also had its effect on the telegraph and mail facilities, and in consequence a part of the full reports of the convention doings prepared and forwarded by The Times-Dispatch's special envoy was lung up in transmission. For instance, the reports of what was done on last Sunday falled to reach here in time for the proper edition of the paper, and the same being good Sunday reading matter and in good keeping condition, were held over until to-day.

Last Sunday was the stormlest day of the entire session of the convention, and several of the appointments for services were cancelled necessarily. However, by aid of eabs and umbrellas, the people ficeked to the churches, the pulpits of most of which were filled by Baptist divines.

nid of caus and uniterials, the pulpits of most of which were filled by Baptist divines.

The committee that arranged the services for Sunday demonstrated, how the eternal fitness of things can be made to fit on any and all occasions by appointing the Rev. John William Jones, D. D., of Richmond, to preach in the afternoon to the Confederate voterans and the inmates of the Soldiers' Home. This service took place at 4 o'clock in the Trinity Lutheran Church, and was attended by the old gray coats and about six hundred ether interested listeners. The doctor preached a doctrine he so much loved, his theme being "The Christian Character of Stonowell Jackson."

PULPITS IN HOTEL, PARLORS.

The rain fell in such torrents all day it was simply impossible for all the people, especially the ladies, to go to church, and so improvised services were held in most of the hotels. Rev. Dr. A. E. Owen, of Portsmouth, preached in the morning to a large congregation in the elegant parlors of the DeSota. In the afternoon a half dozen sweet singing young men gathered around a plano in the rotunda of the same hotel and commenced to sing hymns. Soon they were surrounded by a large crowd of people, many of whom joined in the singing, and Dr. Owen, who happened to be in the crowd, was called on to pray. Soon Dr. Willingham, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, was seen in the crowd, and he was asked to make a talk. "Foreign Mission Board, was seen in the crowd, and he was asked to make a talk. "Foreign Mission Board, was seen in the sond and him $800 for foreign missions. This was followed by other subscriptions, and more than enough was raised to support one foreign missionary for a year. The singing and praying followed for quite a while. Religion and a spirit of missions pervaded the very air all around and about the convention.

Immediately after the fall of the Confederate government the various States of the South made the same provision for the education of the children of the African race, then just freed from slavery as for those of the Anglo-saxon race. This was truly a generous and honorable policy. When one considers all the circumstances, he must concede that such action would have been worthy of the foremost nations of his-hearted race, to open the same door in the foremost nations of his hope to the sons of the Ariot have the warun of Gob for the children, to the remotest generated for the enlighted for the enlighted for the enlighted their fathers made. The speaker then reviewed briefly the career of Dr. Curry in the diplomatic service and concluded his admirable address as follows:

"Death came to him at Asheville, in the Land of the Sky; there he walked with God and was not, for God took him. Thence they brought him home to old Richmond, the city of his heart, and hid him away among its mighty memories and sorrows hard by the spot where sleeps his friend and leader, Jefferson Davis. Pligrims shall come from many lands to stand at the graves of these illustrious men. Each had started from a ditsant country, each had traveled far about the world to find his last resting place so near the other on the banks of the James. The great river shall mad darkened their lives. But the glorious Southern sun shall send own floods of golden light to significance of their hope on high."

centennial of the birth of John Wesley— an event of very striking importance in the denomination.

Elaborate ceremonies will mark the observance of the anniversary, A number of distinguished ministers from the out-side will be present, and local Metho-dists, clergy and laymen, will assemble in force. The services to be held will be distributed through four days, beginning to-day. Throughout the city there will be a concerted effort on the part of the Methodists here to make of occasion an opportunity for arousing Methodist sentiment and disseminating Wesleyan principles. principle: BEGINS THIS MORNING.

BEGINS THIS MORNING.

This mcrning at 11 o'clock a John Wesley service will be held in every Methodist church in Richmond. Exercises of special interest will be conducted, and the old-time Methodist hymns will be sung. The one subject to be discussed by each and all of the pastors will be "John Wesley."

In the afternoon at 3:30 o'clock a great mass-meeting will be held at Centenary. A great outpouring is expected and it is liktly that the attendance will be too large for the church. Arrangements have, therefore, been made for an "overflow" meeting at Grace Street Presbyterian Church, just across the street. As soon as Centenary is filled up the people will be sent over to Grace Street, where some distinguished speakers will be provided. At the Centenary meeting the address will be delivered by the Rev. J. C. Kilgo. At the Centenary meeting the address will be delivered by the Rev. J. C. Kilgo, D. D., president of Trinity College, one of the best known men in the church. His subject will be "The Evangelistic Spirit of Methodism."
